The Met Coke World Summit turns 10! Join more than 225 of your colleagues at Intertech-Pira's 10th annual conference on metallurgical coke and coal. The speaker program will feature 20 experts from the fields of met coal, coke, iron & steel, and international trade and transport to discuss current trends affecting the metallurgical coke industry — supply, demand, pricing, environmental issues, and new technologies.

As the metallurgical coke industry stabilizes from the crisis of the past few years, a new balance is being struck. Global steel demand is forecast to remain strong for the next few years, with growth continuing but slowing in China and ramping up in India and Brazil. North America continues to be an important coke supplier for both its domestic steel market and limited exports abroad. However, North American coke production and consumption have been declining, while imports have climbed; North American cokemakers are reluctant to invest in new ovens while China's coke prices are low. Will Brazil and India's import demands further tighten coke supplies? What will happen to the North American coke market?

Where will your business fit in the new industry balance? Attend Met Coke World Summit 2006 to take advantage of the latest market and technological developments from the industry's key players. Cement existing business relations and make new connections at any of our ten networking functions. This conference is the premier event for metallurgical coke and coal executives, traders, scientists, transportation executives, machinery suppliers, and investors.

"It is the conference to attend in order to establish networks with coke suppliers."

Fred Mazurski, Manager, Energy - USG Corporation

"This conference is still the most balanced conference with a truly global perspective."

Mike Barkdoll, Manager Tech. Development - Sun Coke

"This is the one conference attended by the key individuals in the industry. It's an annual 'must be there' for me."

Jim Truman, Coal Market Analyst - Hill & Associates

"METCOKE continues to provide a good forum for the many sectors of the industry to meet, discuss, and exchange ideas."
